RED AND BLACK

Dedication

It is with sincere gratification that we, the Lawrence High School Senior class of 1922, in small return, and in appreciation of his unfailing kindness to us, in the capacity of instructor, wise counsellor and friend, are in position to dedicate this book to our beloved Principal, a man who has stamped his sterling character indelibly upon hundreds of other graduates who have preceded us, and who, ungrudgingly, has given twenty-seven years of his life to the building of a High School second to none in the Great Middle West.

"New High"

The Liberty Memorial High School is a three story building covering the greater portion of the block bounded by Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and by Massachusetts and New Hampshire streets. It is equipped with offices, ample classrooms, laboratories, domestic science and art rooms, commercial art and music rooms, together with four shops, and an auditorium and a gymnasium. The building is fireproof in construction, beautiful in design, and serviceable from the standpoint of its educational uses. Its capacity is 1100 pupils with provision for future extensions. It is a credit to Lawrence and a model for the state.

Superintendent H. P. Smith

Columbia University

Harry P. Smith, prior to accepting the position as Superintendent of the Public Schools of Lawrence, Kansas two years ago, held a similar position with the school system of Newton, Iowa. He was also a member of the Summer School and Extension School Faculties of the Iowa State Teachers College. In close connection with his school work Mr. Smith has lectured extensively and written a great deal along educational lines.

Mr. Smith came to Lawrence in August, 1920. The first big problem that confronted him was the building situation. The war had made the earlier bond issue wholly inadequate. If Lawrence was to have the High School building a larger bond issue would be necessary. A carefully planned publicity campaign was worked out and pushed to a successful issue. The half million in bonds was voted almost three to one. His experience in former building campaigns made it possible for him to submit to the architect a carefully worked-out plan as to the kind of building needed. The results of this campaign are rapidly taking shape.

Work in the revision of the entire course of study from the first to the twelfth grade is now going on. This work, some of which is already completed, is being done by committees of teachers under the direction of Mr. Smith.

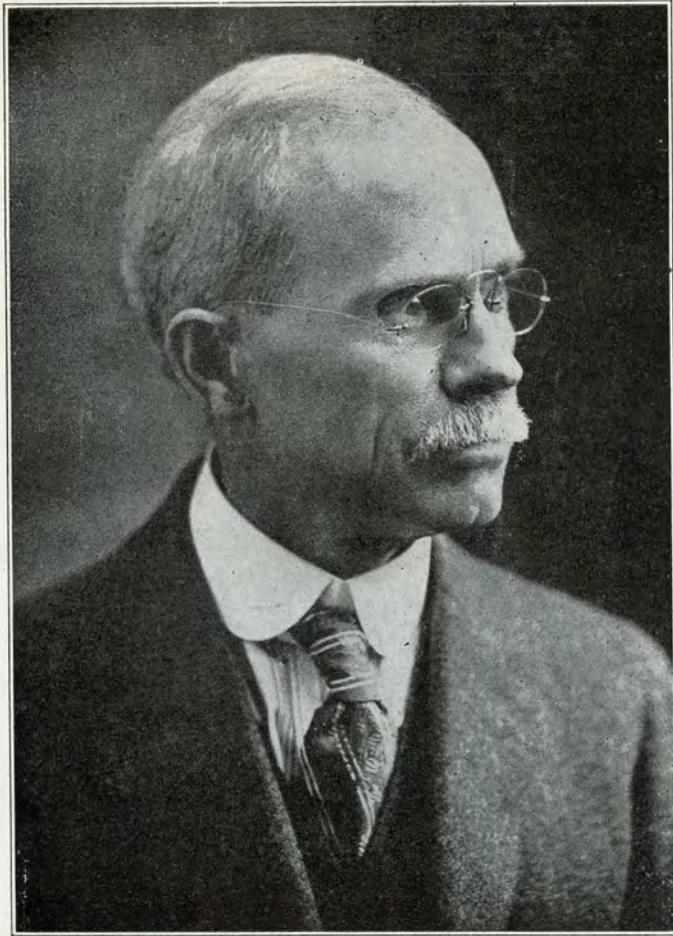

In addition to his work as Superintendent of the city schools he is a member of the faculty of the School of Education in the University of Kansas.

Mrs Himoe

Classes may come and classes may go but Mrs. Himoe goes on forever. In our four years of attendance at this school of schools there has always been one person who has been willing to listen to our troubles. For in the early mornings when our cheerfulness has run low and we are several minutes behind time, our visit to the office in quest of a permit has usually been a cheering moment, because of the smiling face which has greeted us there. We hope that she will greet many more students of Lawrence High School in future years.
