President's Letter

As we enter the spring season of the year, let's look back at the accomplishments of the winter. Some of you have solved some vexing problem that has been stumping them for years. Those that were at our seminar in February with Ronald Bremer will recall his advice to be patient and persevere. With very few exceptions there is some record of each individual out there somewhere just waiting to be found.

Our society has had the 1875 Kansas State Census book on loan from the State Historical Library for almost two years. Several members have worked on filling out index cards for various townships and cities in Douglas County. Several more need to be done in the near future so we can return the book to Topeka. If anyone can help, see one of the officers or contact Lance at the reference desk at the Lawrence Library.

Welcome to our new members. Please let us know how we can be of help to you.

Donald Vaughn, President

Lecompton Territorial Days

The Lecompton Historical Society will celebrate "Territorial Days" June 26th, 1982 at Lecompton, Kansas. For over ten years they have looked forward to this special day, as they are going to dedicate the opening of the Lane University Museum. This building began as the Territorial Capitol of Kansas in 1865, and when the capital was moved to Topeka, the partially built building and material was given to the United Brethren church and they completed the building and dedicated it in June of 1882. Now 100 years later, they are dedicating it again by opening it as a Historical Museum.

David Eisenhower will be our main speaker, as it was at Lane University that his great grandparents, David Eisenhower and Ida Stover met, and married in Lecompton. The dedication will be at 2:00 p.m. on June 26th near the museum. There also will be other activities, starting in the morning and going all day long. Everyone is welcome.

"Robert's Rules are His Cup of Tea"

Copied with premission of Wichita Eagle Beacon
Submitted by Mary Jamison

Boston-Behind every chairman with a fast gavel sits someone like Bill Evans, a fellow with an unwavering devotion to points of order.

A Baltimore lawyer and president of the National Association of Parliamentarians, Evans believes in rules. Make that Robert's Rules.

Some people rebel against rules; parliamentary tactics put others to sleep; Evans scoffs.

"Everyone has to go to meetings," he says. "You go to PTA, a union meeting, even the Garden Club. You wouldn't play poker without knowing the hands and you shouldn't go to a meeting without knowing the rules."

Evans is touring the country to tout a newly revised edition of Robert's Rules of Order. He helped the Robert family--descendants of the original author--with the first overhaul of the manual in a decade.

More than three million copies are in print. The rules are used by virtually every government body and deliberative assembly in America.

Evans' stop in Massachusetts was appropriate. It was, after all, in New Bedford that Henry Martyn Robert, an Army engineering officer, developed the original rules.

Legend has it that Robert, sent to southeastern Massachusetts by the Army in 1863 to recover from tropical fever, was presiding over a church meeting and being battered by bombast he couldn't control.

Robert resolved to study parliamentary law and eventually developed his own rules based on guidelines set down by Thomas Jefferson in 1800 and refined later by Luther Bushing, clerk of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, in 1844.

Henry Robert published the rules with his own money in 1876; no publisher would take the risk. A few of the original manuals still exist.

"Rules are what democracy is about," says Evans, who was the parliamentarian for the Republican National Convention in 1968 and has been the power behind those who preside at a variety of national union meetings.

Robert's original guidelines haven't changed: Abide by the will of the majority; listen to the minority; consider one issue at a time; give everyone a chance to talk, and assure that the discussion is impersonal.

This history presents the United Brethren work 1854 to 1946, and the Evangelical Church work 1857 to 1946. In 1946 the two streams of history merged into one to become The Evangelical United Brethren Church.

THE UNITED BRETHREN CHURCH
 Lawrence, Kansas
 1854-1946

Lawrence probably can claim the first permanent, continuous United Brethren organization in the state of Kansas, altho' this was a much discussed point for many years.

A man whose name was Terrel, preached in Fort Scott and organized a class there sometime during the year 1853. The group seems to have disbanded during the Civil War Years. There was no mention of Fort Scott in the Conference notes until 1890 when a new group was formed.

In a letter to the "Religious Telescope" (official U. B. church paper) Josiah Terrel wrote, "I am glad that the Board of Missions has sent a missionary to Kansas." He had reference to S. S. Snyder, the first regularly appointed missionary to the Kansas Mission. (He was the man for whom our local church was named.) Mr. Snyder was appointed by the Home Frontier and Foreign Missionary Society in June, 1854 and arrived in Kansas in October of that same year. He brought his family to Lawrence, a community of about 600 persons, and staked out a claim near the edge of the settlement. He attended the first Missouri Conference which was held in Jasper County, Missouri at Short Creek Schoolhouse in November, 1854. It was here that the first United Brethren minister (S. S. Snyder) met the first missionary to Kansas (Mr. Josiah Terrel). Rev. Snyder held services in a plank shanty located near the place where the Granada Theater now stands.

When it was learned that the Kansas Pacific Railroad would come through Lawrence on the north side of the Kaw River, the church fathers decided that Lawrence would make its growth north of the river, therefore they erected their second church there near Bismarck Grove. Later a third was built at Fourth and Locust Streets in North Lawrence. This building was used until 1914.

William A. Cardwell, from the Indiana Conference, came to the Kansas Territory in 1855 to work with S. S. Snyder. He (Cardwell) wrote on April 30, 1855 that he had a list of donations totalling $131.00 to be used in building a church in Lawrence, but that the building wasn't completed until 1867. This reference must have been to the second meeting place, the one at Bismarck Grove. However, Mr. Cardwell went to Big Springs, west of Lawrence, where he organized a class, and succeeded in building a church late in the year 1856. This building at Big Springs was the first church to be built for the United Brethren in the State of Kansas.

The Rev. S. S. Snyder was the first man killed by the Quantrill Raiders in their attack on Lawrence. He had been commissioned a Lieutenant of the Colored Troops in this area. This fact, combined with his preaching and his anti-slavery views prompted the raiders to seek him out and to murder him as they entered Lawrence on August 19, 1863. The first United Brethren Church building erected in Lawrence was named for this martyr--"The S. S. Snyder Memorial". At the time of his death the group was meeting in a hut at about the present site of the Granada Theatre, referred to earlier.

The Kansas Mission Conference of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ was organized in October 30, 1857, with the Rev. S. S. Snyder as presiding elder. At a meeting of the Kansas Conference in April, 1867, it was reported that the church building at Lawrence was almost completed. The sixteenth Convention of the Conference was held in the new building in 1871.

Very early in the period when settlers were coming to Lawrence, the Friends (Quakers) erected a very large native stone building on the land now occupied by the city baseball park at 11th and Delaware. The main purpose of this building was for their Conventions and Conferences so it was of necessity quite roomy. It is thought that, for a time before a permanent building was erected, the United Brethren used this building for their Church Services.

In the year 1914 a new brick building was completed at the corner of 17th and Vermont Streets. "The S. S. Snyder Memorial Church" as it was known was dedicated October 3, 1915 at a cost of $15,000.00. This building burned on February 8, 1936. The Journal World for February 10, 1936 states that the building and its contents were a total loss, the firefighters being hampered by sub-zero temperatures. The Rev. C. L. Huffman was pastor of the church when the building burned, the Rev. C. L. Heatherington had just completed 7 years of service in the Lawrence territory the previous December (1935) and the Rev. Arthur Ward arrived sometime in 1936 to serve 6 years with this congregation.

With the arrival of Mr. Ward plans were made to erect a fine, new L-shaped building of native stone. He spent long hours in physical labor in the construction and building of the basement for this proposed church, also, in his six years of service a substantial sum of money was raised to use in the building of the new structure. Because of many difficulties his dream of completing the super-structure was never realized. In 1942 he was assigned a charge near Winfield; Lawrence Deever succeeded him at Lawrence. By this time the congregation had dwindled to a mere "handful," and there was talk of merging. The official merger with the Evangelical Church began in March of 1946. With the uniting of the two denominations the Lawrence Church then became known as the Evangelical United Brethren Church. The work of the Kingdom moved forward. The beautiful new church at 1501 Massachusetts was dedicated in 1948 and has continued to move forward to a present membership of 301. The basement structure was sold to the Immanuel Lutheran Church in 1948.

THE EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Lawrence, Kansas
1857-1946

Franklin, Eudora, Clearfield Circuit, 1857

Evangelical United Brethren Church 1946-1959

The Evangelical United Brethren Church is the oldest American born denomination. It was not the first denomination on American soil for other churches preceded it, having come here from Europe. It is not a split off of any other church but was the result of a need and the meeting of that need.

German speaking people emigrated to this continent, settled in Maryland and Pennsylvania. There were no churches, no pastors, but men filled with the Spirit from German Reform, Mennonite, Presbyterian, Lutheran, and Methodist denominations began bringing the word of God to early settlers.

Our church is not an "ism" or a tangent organization. It is sound, stable, and founded upon the fundamental doctrines of Christianity.

In 1804 Jacob Albright of Pennsylvania founded this organization especially for the German speaking people of Pennsylvania. The Discipline was very similar to that of the Methodist Church.

We are indebted to the early ministers of Kansas for the history of our church at this time, but they were History Makers and not History Writers. Appeals were made to the Eastern Conferences through the "Evangelical Messenger" and "Der Christliche Botschafter". The general missionary society made no provision for this type of work, the Conference had to make the provision and some conferences were not interested in moving West. The Illinois conference was very sympathetic to the calls but even so the reply was often, "no funds, no available men."

Bishop Long was very instrumental in getting a change in the Missionary Society so that funds would be available for this work in the West.

Kansas was organized as a territory in 1854. The Government offered very liberal Homestead Laws, hence many Evangelicals emigrated to Kansas, took up homesteads, built homes, mostly of log or sod, tilled the soil, but there were no churches of their choice in which to worship.

As early of 1857 and 1858, Joseph Ettinger of Leavenworth and James Epley of Old Franklin (3 miles S. E. of Lawrence) wrote letters to the "Evangelical Messenger" and "Der Christliche Botschafter" (church papers) to assist in publicizing the appeal for man to preach the gospel. This bore fruit, for July 4, 1858 George Fleisher arrived at Old Franklin and J. F. Shreiber in Nebraska.

Classes were established at Franklin, Eudora, Clearfield, Owl Creek, and near Humboldt, in fact our first church built in Kansas was at Humboldt. The people of this territory were hungry for the gospel message. A minister's charge consisted of a circuit made up of classes. Often a circuit was 200 or even 300 miles in area. The people gathered in homes, school house and store buildings. The mode of travel for the minister was horse back or in a "buckboard" accompanied with a Bible, Hymn Book and Church Discipline.

1860 was a famine year. Drought appeals were made to the eastern churches for help. Cash, food, and clothing were sent. The "Missionary Barrels" of those days were a blessing. Also the war clouds were gathering and there was great unrest among all people.

Then in 1861 the beginning of the Civil War with Kansas, a free territory, next to Missouri, a slave state, brought on much border warfare. In fact, Rev. Snyder of the United Brethren Church of Lawrence was the first man killed in Quantrill's Raid. Our work was greatly hindered. Many were called to the army and many met death by bush whackers and hostile Indians.

In spite of the hardships people were deeply interested and the average collected for the work in Kansas in 1861 was $3.00 per member.

In 1862 pleas were made for the organization of a Kansas Conference. In 1864 the Iowa Conference met and organized the Kansas Conference, which comprised the entire state of Kansas. There were 50 classes with a membership of 100. Camp meetings were held near Eudora and Clearfield which was on the Lawrence Circuit. Many were gloriously saved. The first Kansas Conference session was held at Leavenworth in 1865.

In 7 years the work had grown to a membership of 176, 3 churches, 3 parsonages, 2 Sunday Schools with 54 scholars. Early ministers were not overpaid, the average annual salary for a single man was $125.00 plus $31.25 for table expense. A married man's salary twice as much plus $25.00 for each child with $6.25 per year added table service.

In 1877 the Kansas Conference was incorporated under the Kansas Law. This gave them the right to do business legally.

In 1861 Joseph Rahskopf (father of Ed Rahskopf of 1035 Pennsylvania Street of Lawrence) was licensed to preach.

In 1878 Peter Schumann (father of Katherine Schumann and grandfather of Ethelbert and Emerson Ott) was licensed to preach in Kansas.

In 1881 Moses Dissinger (father of our late Fred Dissinger) served this field.

In 1886 we had the sad misfortune of an abnormal boom. Eastern capital poured in, towns sprang up, real estate inflated and factories where there was no reasonable grounds for success.

Two years later there came the depression and our work really faced a crisis.

In 1890 S. A. Burgert (father of Ralph, Irma and Alice Nelson of our present congregation) was licensed and in 1890 was sent as the first missionary to Oklahome, "The Strip" having been opened in 1889. It was a very rugged and immoral field.

In 1893 the language question arose. The local field or church decided to use either or both, the English and German.

In 1897 there was another depression and many fields were discontinued or consolidated.

In 1899 The Kansas Conference ordered an organization in Lawrence but it failed to materialize.

In 1901 F. M. Peek (father of Marian Peek of Lawrence) was licensed by the conference held at Willow Springs (now Worden).

In 1909 the annual conference held at Jewell located a Mission at Lawrence and appointed E. J. Feitz as pastor. Thus in May, 1909 E. J. Feitz organized the work at Lawrence. The church was to be known as the Zion Evangelical Church.

The organization had 26 members and there was no church home. The first quarterly conference was held in June 1909 composed of the following: Presiding Elder D. Swart, J. Wuerth, P. Schumann, J. Rahskopf, J. Houk, Wm. Fleisher, W. F. Zeeb and E. J. Feitz.

It was reported that the Swedish Lutheran Church at 1000 Connecticut Street, Lawrence, Kansas was disbanded and their church was for sale. The quarterly conference appointed a committee of five to negotiate for the purchase of the church and in 1909 it was purchased for the sum of $1100.00. Next, the Annual Conference was petitioned for help to remodel the church.

In 1911 the church was raised and resided, with labor largely done by the members. And on September 3, 1911 the "new church" was dedicated. Emil Wendland was the pastor.

The Ladies Aid was organized at church on October 23, 1913 and they met weekly for work.

In February 1917 it was decided to improve the church building again. The basement was enlarged, a furnace was installed and it was resolved to buy a parsonage; therefore one was purchased at 1009 Connecticut for $3500.00. In 1919 the Women's Missionary Society was organized.

In about the year 1920 the church was partially destroyed by fire.

In March 4, 1946 the Zion Evangelical Church and the United Brethren in Christ Church merged. To our knowledge this was the first merger on the local level of churches later to be known as The Evangelical United Brethren Church. This was brought about by the uniting of the two denominations November 16, 1946. During the pastorate of Leland Young, 1945-58, a new church building at 1501 Massachusetts Street was built and dedicated.

A few statistics

1909-Church building, 1000 Connecticut St. purchased

1918-Parsonage at 1009 Connecticut St. was purchased

1948-the new church 1501 Massachusetts St. was built and dedicated

1954-the new parsonage, 1530 Kentucky

1956-new cabin built at Forest Park, Topeka

1957-The "Annex" at 1507 Mass. St. was purchased

Membership:

The church membership in 1909-26
 Sunday School membership-no record, but in 1910 was 46
 Church membership in 1959-301
 Sunday School Membership in 1959-340

We are indebted to the ministers and laymen of the century who used every means at hand so effectively that we still wonder at their success.

They set a very high standard for Christians of today. One characteristic of the early church was a consciousness of God's Program "Jesus, the Saviour for a Lost World" and the courage to go forth in His power. So may we in like manner go "forward".

"A LOVE THAT TRANSCENDS SADNESS"

Written by Willie Morris

Not too long ago, in a small Southern town where I live, I was invited by friends to go with them and their children to the cemetery to help choose their burial plot. My friends are in the heartiest prime of life and do not anticipate departing the Lord's earth immediately, and hence, far from being funereal, our search had an adventurous mood to it, like picking out a Christmas tree. It was that hour before twilight, and the marvelous old graveyard with its cedars and magnolias and flowering glades sang with the Mississippi springtime. The honeysuckled air was an affirmation of the tugs and tremors of living. My companions had spent all their lives in the town, and the names on even the oldest stones were as familiar to them as the people they saw every day. "Location," the man of the family said, laughing. "As the real-estate magnates say, we want location."

At last they found a plot in the most venerable section which was to their liking, having spurned a shady spot which I had recommended under a giant oak. I knew the caretaker would soon have to come to this place of their choice with a long, thin steel rod, shoving it into the ground every few inches to see if it struck forgotten coffins. If not, this plot was theirs. Our quest had been a tentative success, and we retired elsewhere to celebrate.

Their humor coincided with mine, for I am no stranger to graveyards, with rare exceptions, ever since my childhood, they have suffused me not with foreboding but with a sense of belonging and, as I grow older, with a curious, ineffable tenderness. My dog Pete and I go out into the cemeteries, not only to escape the telephone, and those living beings who place more demands on us than the dead ever would, but to feel a continuity with the flow of the generations.

"Living," William Faulkner wrote, "is a process of getting ready to be dead for a long time."

I have never been lonely in a cemetery. They are perfect places to observe the slow changing of the seasons, and to absorb human history--the tragedies and anguishes, the violences and treacheries, and always the guilts and sorrows of vanished people. In a preternatural quiet, one can almost hear the palpable, long-ago voices.

I especially like the small-town cemeteries of America where the children come for picnics and games, as we did when I was growing up--wandering among the stones on our own, with no adults about, to regard the mystery and inevitability of death, on its terms and ours. I remember we would watch the funerals from afar in a hushed awe, and I believe that was when I became obsessed not with death itself but with the singular community of death and life together--and life's secrets, life's fears, life's surprises. Later, in high school, as I waited on a hill to play the echo to taps on my trumpet for the Korean War dead, the tableau below with its shining black hearse and the coffin enshrouded with the flag and the gathering mourners was like a folk drama, with the earth as its stage.

The great urban cemeteries of New York City always filled me with horror, the mile after mile of crowded tombstones which no one ever seemed to visit, as if one could find anyone in there even if he wished to. Likewise, the suburban cemeteries of this generation with their carefully manicured lawns and bronze plaques embedded in the ground, all imbued with affluence and artifice, are much too remote for me. My favorites have always been in the old, established places where people honor the long dead and the new graves are in proximity with the most ancient. The churchyard cemeteries of England haunted me with the eternal rhythms of time. In one of these, years ago as a student at Oxford, I found this inscription:

Here lies Johnny Kongapod,
Have mercy on him, gracious God.
As he would on You if he was God,
And You were Johnny Kongapod.

Equally magnetic were the graveyards of eastern Long Island, with their patina of the past touched every so mellowly with the present. The cemetery of Wainscott, Long Island, only a few hundred yards from the Atlantic Ocean, surrounded the schoolhouse. I would watch the children playing at recess among the graves. Later I discovered a man and his wife juxtaposed under identical stones. On the wife's tomb was "Rest in Peace." On the man's at the same level, was "No Comment." I admired the audacity of that.

But it is the graveyards of Mississippi which are the most moving for me, having to do, I believe, with my belonging here. They spring from the earth itself, and beckon me time and again. The crumbling stones of my people evoke in me the terrible enigmas of living. In a small Civil War cemetery which I came across recently, the markers stretching away in a misty haze, it occurred to me that most of these boys had never even had a girl friend. I have found a remote graveyard in the hills with photographs on many of the stones, some nearly one hundred years old, the women in bonnets and Sunday dresses, the men in overalls--"the short and simple annals of the poor." I am drawn here to the tiny grave of a little girl. Her name was Fairy Jumper, and she lived from April 14, 1914 to Jan. 16, 1919. There is a miniature lamb at the top of the stone, and the words: "A fairer bud of promise never bloomed." There are no other Jumpers around her, and there she is, my Fairy, in a far corner of that country burial ground, so forlorn and alone that it is difficult to bear. It was in this cemetery on a bleak February noon that I caught sight of four men digging a grave in the hard, unyielding soil. After a time they gave up. After they left, a man drove toward me in a battered truck. He wanted to know if some fellows had been working on the grave. Yes, I said, but they went away. "Well, I can't finish all by myself." Wordlessly, I helped him dig.

One lonesome, windswept afternoon my dog and I were sitting at the crest of a hill in the town cemetery. Down below us, the acres of empty land were covered with wildflowers. A new road was going in down there, the caretaker told me; the area was large enough to accommodate the next three generations. "With the economy so bad," I had asked him, "how can you be expanding?" He had replied: "It comes in spurts. Not a one last week. Five put down the week before. It's a pretty steady business."

Sitting there now in the dappled sunshine, a middle-aged man and his middle-aged dog, gazing across the untenanted terrain awaiting its dead, I thought of how each generation lives with its own exclusive solitudes--the passions, the defeats, the victories, the sacrifices, the names and dates and the faces belong to each generation in its own passing, for much of everything except the most unforgettable is soon forgotten. And yet: though much is taken, much abides. I thought then of human beings, on this cinder of a planet out at the edge of the universe, not knowing where we came from, why we are here, or where we might go after death--and yet we still laugh, and cry, and feel, and love.

"All that we can know about those we have loved and lost," Thornton Wilder wrote, "is that they would wish us to remember them with a more intensified realization of their reality. What is essential does not die but clarifies. The highest tribute to the dead is not grief but gratitude."
